Personal Update

Third-Culture Kid Pre-Field Orientation

From June 23rd to July 6th we attended a conference called Third-Culture Kid Pre-Field Orientation (TCK-PFO) in Houghton, NY.

A third-culture kid (TCK) is someone who spends their developmental years in a culture different from their parents. Missionary kids (MKs) fall into this category. These children tend to think differently from children who grow up in their own cultures and therefore sometimes require a unique approach in education. TCK-PFO was designed to aid teachers to better understand the students they will encounter on the field.

We really enjoyed the program and developed some deep friendships. We have come away more excited about teaching the MKs at Carachipampa. We have also learned a lot about ourselves, as we are both MKs, too.

Brandon and Jamie attended a conference in Houghton, NY, preparing them for teaching TCKs.

SIMCO Summer 2007

From July 7th to July 14th we attended SIM's Candidate Orientation conference (SIMCO) in Charlotte, NC.

There we met many other SIMers who are preparing to go to the field as well. We also learned about SIM's core values and some of the logistics of living overseas.

So after practically a month of conferences and training, we are ready to face our mission.
